Musical Synergies, Cyprus – Russia

A concert with one of the many waltzes by Chopin, as well as his Piano concerto no.2, the first one he wrote, in 1830, which abounds with sensual ornamentation, bewitching harmonies, and unmistakable references to Polish folk music. As for Shchedrin's Carmen suite, this came into existence in a rather roundabout fashion, after the composer was asked for a new ballet featuring Prosper Mérimée's fiery heroine. Shchedrin however found it impossible to think of the story without Bizet's famous tunes going through his head, so in the end he decided to exploit the original opera, describing the process as "a creative meeting of minds". But this was the Soviet Union in the late 60's, and after the first performance it was banned by the authorities as "insulting to Bizet's masterpiece". It took Shostakovich's intervention to get the ballet back on the approved list, and it's since become Shchedrin's best-known work.

Two subjects - One exhibition

The Collection Gallery is showcasing the artworks of George Gavriel who presents two themes, as the title suggests. It is "spiritual" and also addressed to the senses. The first one presents the Cypriot life completely given from his perspective and his own timeless aesthetic criteria and the other one states dynamically, that "artists make art in the service of society, create projects that fight injustice and encourage participation in political action." In a roll-over time when society is shaken to its foundations, George Gavriel, a sensitive artist is again at the forefront. This theme is a review of the new order of things as we experience today, given through an experimental approach.

GENIUS LOCI

IOANNIS KISSONERGHIS AND BRITISH LANDSCAPE PAINTERS

The idea for this exhibition was initiated by the Curator of the Cyprus Collection, Dr Eleni S. Nikita, on the occasion of the agreement signed by the A. G. Leventis Gallery and the family of Ioannis Kissonerghis, whereby the family is offering their collection of works by Kissonerghis to the Gallery on a long-term loan. Aiming at illuminating as clearly as possible the first steps of Cypriot art in the early 20th century, the exhibition will examine the relationship between Ioannis Kissonerghis and the landscape painting tradition created in Cyprus by traveller-artists, in particular British visitors or temporary residents of the island. This connection will be traced in the works of such artists as William Hawkins (1845-1902), H. W. Seton-Karr (1858-1938), John Everett, Lady Meriel Edith Chenevix Trench (1890-1985), Tristram Ellis (1844-1922) and others.

Beethoven: Complete works for violoncello and piano - Part II

Péter Somodari | violoncello
Nicolas Costantinou | piano

The composition of sonatas for piano and cello was unthinkable before Beethoven; up until then, the cello would mainly provide the bass line. Moreover, this particular combination posed various difficulties as the piano would often outweigh the low notes of the cello and balance between the two instruments is always precarious. Beethoven was the first composer to tackle these challenges (his example was not followed until 1824). The works for piano and cello are representative of the three periods of Beethoven's artistic creation: the 'classical' (WoO 45, 46, opp. 5, 66), the 'heroic' (op. 69) and the 'late' (op. 102). Inspired by the unmatched capabilities of various renowned cellists and his own abilities as a virtuoso pianist, the sonatas not only represented an example par excellence for the subsequent generation of composers, but they also pose tremendous challenges for cellists and pianists alike.

“Amathous of Cyprus, a city most ancient”

Amathous is one of the most interesting city-kingdoms of ancient Cyprus. On the occasion of 40 years of excavations (1975–2015) of the French Archaeological Mission of Amathous, the Department of Antiquities in collaboration with the French School at Athens, is organizing this exhibition. The exhibition covers a large chronological period, from prehistory to the first centuries of the Christian period. The exhibits are presented in four different thematic entities, which narrate the history of the city and the region of Amathous by providing information on public and private life, rituals, burial customs and commercial or cultural exchanges. The exhibition includes a brief reference to legends and traditions and the fact that the inhabitants of Lemesos, at least from the medieval period until today, refer to Amathous as “Palia Lemesos”, thus keeping alive the memory of the important city of ancient Cyprus, which was in fact the predecessor of the modern city of Limassol.
